

Liz began her career as a strategic planning analyst at CNN. In 2006, she joined Lead Star and serves as our firm's Executive Director, where she handles everything from client relations to strategic partnerships. Liz oversees all activities related to our active leadership development business, including developing course materials, administering online assessments, and providing infrastructure and support for our consultants.

Liz has also worked as a consultant to organizations including Ford Motor Company and the International Monetary Fund, and served as Director of Programs for a non-profit organization dedicated to health policy. Liz holds a B.A. from Wellesley College and currently lives with her husband and two sons in the Lehigh Valley area of Pennsylvania.
